LITTLE LIGHT

Thrown on the Mount Pleasant Murder at Cramblett's Hearing.

DEFENSE SEEKS TO IMPLICATE

Jeff Rainbow, Who Lived Near Gosnell's Home and Was on Bad Terms With the Murdered Man—Cora Gosnell, Whom Cramblett Wanted to Marry, on the Stand Yesterday. Unusual Interest is Manifested.

The quiet little town of Mt. Pleasant, O., was crowded yesterday. People came from every direction to attend the preliminary hearing of Quincy Cramblett, the young farmer, charged with the murder of James Gosnell. The hearing was held in Union hall and the place was packed to suffocation, people hanging to a ledge outside the second story windows, where they could hear the testimony of the various witnesses. Squire Humphreyville rapped for order at 1:35 p. m. and Prosecuting Attorney A. C. Lewis opened by stating that a mistake had been made in the affidavit and that Cramblett stood charged with shooting to kill. An affidavit charging him with murder in the first degree was substituted and Cramblett pleaded not guilty to that. While hearing the charge read he stood with his hands behind his back, his serious countenance not betraying any emotions, and he answered in a cool, firm manner.

If the theory of the prosecution is correct, the story of the case is one of wild, passionate insane love, ending in desperation, crime and blackest despair. It is a story of a young man whose whole being is fired by the flames of passion, but who is held aloof until the fire burns into his brain and he is willing to sacrifice liberty, reputation and if necessary life, in order to gain an end.

It is a story of a lover who has gone mad, who seeing the girl he loves held back from him by force, seeing her separated from him by the will of one man, her father, resolves to put that man out of the way forever. The prosecution is forging quite a chain of circumstantial evidence about him. On the other hand the defense is fighting every inch, backed by popular opinion, which is inclined to doubt whether Cramblett fired the fatal shot. The prosecution failed to show any bad feeling between Cramblett and Gosnell, but on the other hand the defense proved that Jeff Rainbow, a neighbor, and Gosnell were bitter enemies, the feeling breaking out at times and they are attempting to shift suspicion to Rainbow.

The trial was attended by a large number of the fair sex, drawn there to see Cramblett, who was always popular with women, and they stuck the trial through, though it is a wonder a score did not faint in the crush of people. Cramblett is defended by ex-Prosecuting Attorney E. E. Erskine, of Steubenville.

The Wife's Testimony.
Mrs. Mary Gosnell, widow of the deceased man, was first on the stand. She showed by her troubled face the ordeal she has been passing through and when several times the crowd broke into laughter at some question concerning the love affair of her daughter, she spoke up and asked that levity be silenced, as it was too serious for her. She described how her husband was shot and the exciting movements following which has been published heretofore. She heard no noise outside either before or after the shooting, and even the dog did not bark, but he does not bother persons who come around except only by spells. She says Jeff Rainbow was the first man to appear after the shooting, and they sent him for neighbors and also for Cramblett, and when Cramblett came her daughter Cora, fell into his arms and wept. She says Cramblett had been coming to the house to see the girls, but he had not been keeping company with them, although her husband suspected he was in love with the youngest daughter, and told his wife he did not want Cramblett to be Cora's husband, but her husband never told Cramblett that, neither did she tell the young man.

Mrs. Cramblett never talked to her daughter about it either, though she told her she thought Cramblett "green."

She said Cramblett always behaved when he came to the house, sitting in the same room with the family, and that though at times her husband, who was crabbed by spells, acted grumpy when Cramblett would first come, he would get over it and invite him back. One time her husband said he expected he would have to hoist Cramblett out some time. She says after Cramblett came at their request the night of the murder, he stayed around until the funeral was over and did the chores and went to Long Run to get things to bury her husband in. She said Rainbow and her husband had been on bad terms for years, since a pocketbook had been missed out of the Gosnell house. A few weeks before the murder her husband caught Rainbow's children in the kitchen, and one of them was looking in the cupboard and he ordered them out. One child said they were looking for a turkey, and Gosnell told them the turkey was not there. She said she had told everything she knew about the murder and was holding nothing back, and she never said she ought not to tell all she knew about the murder.

Daughter on the Stand.
Cora Gosnell, the youngest daughter, is a pretty girl, who has been going through a trying ordeal with her father murdered and her lover in custody on suspicion. She told her story with much simplicity. She said she had known Cramblett for three years and he had been paying her attention for about a year and he had told her he loved her and she loved him. She said he had proposed marriage a number of times, but she had refused, one reason being that she did not think she was able to care for a house properly and the other because she had seen what a fuss the marriage of her older sister against her father's wishes had stirred up. On the Monday before the murder she was tak-

SALESWOMEN understand what torture is. Constantly on their feet whether well or ill. Compelled to smile and be agreeable to customers while dragged down with some feminine weakness. Backaches and headaches count for little. They must keep going or lose their place.

To these Mrs. Pinkham's help is offered. A letter to her at Lynn, Mass., will bring her advice free of all charge.

Miss NANCIE SHORE, Florence, Col., writes a letter to Mrs. Pinkham from which we quote:

"I had been in poor health for some time, my troubles having been brought on by standing, so my physician said, causing serious womb trouble. I had to give up my work. I was just a bundle of nerves and would have fainting spells at monthly periods. I doctored and took various medicines, but got no relief, and when I wrote to you I could not walk more than four blocks at a time. I followed your advice, taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier in connection with the Vegetable Compound and began to gain in strength from the first. I am getting to be a stranger to pain and I owe it all to your medicine. There is none equal to it, for I have tried many others before using yours. Words cannot be said too strong in praise of it."

MISS POLLY FRAME, Meado, Kan., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I feel it my duty to write you in regard to what your medicine has done for me. I cannot praise it enough. Since my girlhood I had been troubled with irregular and painful periods and for nearly five years had suffered with falling of the womb, and whites. Also had ovarian trouble, the left ovary being so swollen and sore that I could not move without pain. Now, thanks to your wonderful medicine, that tired feeling is all gone, and I am healthy and strong."

ing the cows to pasture and Cramblett who was going to her sister's, met her at "Cow field gap." He asked her to marry him and she refused. He asked her to promise to marry him some time, promising to get her a ring, but she refused to promise. He wanted her to meet him at a neighbor's, where they could keep company, but refused on her parents' account, fearing they would find it out. Cramblett then proposed that they kill themselves and be out of the way, but she said sensibly, she did not want to die so young. She said Cramblett had proposed several times that they kill themselves and had said he would rather be in the middle of the sea than do without her. Cramblett never made threats against her father, and he always treated her right.

Coroner J. A. Fisher was the last witness examined before supper. He described how he found things when he went to Gosnell's the day following the murder. He told where he got the bullets, felt bad and broken glass. He described the foot prints in the garden and the horse's tracks, where it was hitched to the fence some distance from Gosnell's, the horse's tracks corresponding to Cramblett's horse, as one shoe was missing. He would not say the hair found on the fence was part of Cramblett's horse's mane. The coroner contended that the man's and horse's tracks were fresh, and the defendant's attorney debated the question as to his being an expert on foot prints, at some length, Fisher insisting that he could tell.

Detective Work.
In the evening Sheriff Porter testified to examining the horse tracks and making a comparison to Cramblett's horse's feet. He made an examination at Cramblett's house, but found no gun from which the charge of bullets could have been shot. They found one bullet in a pouch, however. They went from Gosnell's to Cramblett's when the search was made, telling Cramblett, who was at the Gosnell house of the trip, and he asked to be allowed to go along, and he was given permission to Cramblett cried when asking to be allowed to go along and made no objection to any search. Quite a legal tilt took place at this juncture, as it developed that Coroner Fisher had taken Cramblett's sworn testimony at the inquest without warning him of his rights as a suspected man. Justice Humphreyville decided to admit the stenographer's notes as to what Cramblett said, as the defendant's attorney thought it is good testimony for them or the state would have introduced it. Sheriff Porter said Cramblett told him he lost the shoe going to Long Run Sunday, the day after the shooting, but a later witness said Cramblett told him he lost it Saturday night, the night of the murder.

Walker Meek, the local Sherlock Holmes, told of tracking the foot prints of the horse hitched at Gosnell's fence the night of the shooting, and there was one shoe missing corresponding to Cramblett's horse, but William Cheffey, a later witness, who was along with Meek, said there were three shoes missing and this corresponds to Rainbow's horse. Meek would not say from which Cramblett's mane the hair found on the fence came from. It is given out though, that Cheffey is a relative of Cramblett by marriage.

George Gosnell, a nephew of the murdered man, testified that two Martin's Ferry officers came to Gosnell's one day after the shooting and wanted to see Cramblett, and he went after him in a buggy. On the way Cramblett told him, "If the rest of the family stick by me I am all right." Gosnell could not remember anything only this lone sentence.

Mrs. Lavinia Rainbow, mother of Jeff Rainbow, and a neighbor of Gosnell's, testified to hearing the report of a gun the night of the murder, and thinking Gosnell had shot a coon, went out to hear the dog and coon scrap. She heard screams and heard a horse go up the road on the gallop. And in a short time her son came in and said Gosnell was shot and took her down and went for neighbors. She said her son was at Dillonvale the day of the shooting and ate his supper and he was sent further down the road on his way home some minutes before the murder. Her son, Jeff Rainbow, and Gosnell had been enemies for years, because Jeff had shot a dog of Gosnell's, and later they had a fuss because Jeff had moved a boundary line stone. She said that her son's children could not have been in Gosnell's kitchen, as they were so afraid of Gosnell they would not go on his land.

The hearing adjourned at 9 p. m. until to-day at 9 a. m.

IN GLASS CIRCLES.

The National Glass Company Eager to Acquire the Central Plant, But Local Stockholders are Dubious. Something May Come of the Westwood Proposition.

The National Glass Company is after the Central glass works again, it is said, and unless the stockholders refrain from selling off their holdings at the rate offered by the combine, the plant will be in its hands before very long.

It has been learned that the National has offered 150 for the stock and has managed to buy up considerable of it at that rate, so much in fact, that the danger line is uncomfortably close. Of the twelve hundred shares, it is understood that the National has secured over four hundred.

The National is composed of tableware factories, and is desirous of securing the Central along with the others in order to better be able to compete with smaller concerns.

The plan to have a revival in the glass industry on the South Side is by no means dead, and at any time in the near future it may be expected to take on new life and be pushed to something more definite than mere talk.

An Intelligencer man yesterday talking with a gentleman interested in the project and learned from him that while there was no movement of a definite nature on foot at present, there will likely be in a few weeks. Since the downfall of the scheme to buy the old Hobbs works from the United States company there has been considerable figuring going on by the substantial business men of the South Side, and the result is that the offer of Edward Westwood to donate his ground in the lower part of town for the purpose of erecting a plant, may be taken up.

In speaking of it the gentleman in question said: "The proposition to buy the Hobbs plant was out of reason. The figure was entirely too high and it would require $25,000 to put the old plant in condition again. For this reason the Westwood property would be the more acceptable. It has good facilities for railroad switches and in many other ways is admirably adapted to the purpose."

Held the Pilot Responsible.
NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The verdict of the coroner's jury in the case of the death of the five persons by drowning as a result of a collision in the North river between the Pennsylvania railroad company's ferryboat Chicago, and the steamer City of Augusta, of the Savannah line, on the morning of October 31 last, was reported to-day. It was that these persons came to their deaths by asphyxiation by drowning owing to the fact that William Durham, pilot of the ferryboat Chicago, disregarded a signal from the City of Augusta and proceeded to cross the latter's bow in violation of the rules in such cases. Captain Durham, who has been out on $10,000 bail, was allowed to continue the ball and Captain Daggett, of the City of Augusta, was discharged.

L. E. & W. Officials and Men Confer.
CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 22.—Representatives of the trainmen of the Lake Erie & Western railway were in conference with the officials of the company here to-day, with reference to a demand made by the men for a general advance in wages. It is understood that the company has already agreed to an advance and that the question now under consideration is merely as to how the increase shall be graded among the men.

SEVENTEEN MEN

Stood the "Moslem Test" at Arion Hall Last Night.

SHRINERS HAVE MUCH FUN.

The Parade Abandoned Owing to the Weather, But the Ceremonies at the Hall Were Not Dampened in the Least—A Large Crowd Present, Including Many Visitors—The Usual Banquet Followed the "Scene in the Torture Chamber."

"Allah is great!" So say the numerous victims that summed up courage to undergo the terrible ordeal that was in store for them at Arion hall last night when Oslris temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Noble of the Mystic Shrine, held its autumnal crossing of the sands.

It was a gala night for those who had previously peered into the mysteries of that side degree of Masonry which has caused many a man who has traveled eastward neither dressed and yet not naked, to lay awake nights and think, yes contemplate what was best to do when in a tight place, for it has been written that many are the tight and narrow places awaiting one so foolish as to try to gain the knowledge of the Arabic tribe of Shriners who is not of the clean and cleansed kith and kin.

It had originally been prescribed that a procession was to precede the "doings" at Arion hall, but the weather man was cruel enough to furnish a quality of weather that would not permit the appearance of the conventional dress suit and fez that make up a Shriner's outfit. So this portion of the programme was eliminated.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the hall was well filled with good and true Shriners and after the "feller who gathers in the shekels" had received his fill, Pontentate James B. McKee said everything was ready and the fun began, i. e., for the spectators.

The pilgrimage to Mecca is a long one and the passage way is full of thorns and briars and every one of the victims can testify to that this morning. Sounds most peculiar came from the room where the work of torture was being carried on and every now and then a shot was heard which seemed to indicate that the candidate was being given a lesson or two in sharp-shooting. Then a low rumbling noise like distant thunder, struck the ear and the sound of horse's hoofs, then some one yelled "He'd make a good Rough Rider!" and there was a general laugh.

Suffice it to say that all stood the Moslem test admirably, and when at last they reached the cooling springs of Zem Zem and there quenched their parched tongues there came forth from each of them a sigh of relief, but when they heard the sweet strains of "He's a Shriner" come from the musical throats of those about them there was general rejoicing.

A swell banquet finished up the evening's enjoyment and on this caterer John Ziegenfelder showed his best effort. It was a feast fit for the gods and was thoroughly enjoyed by the "congregation."

Those who "stood the test" were: Messrs. John H. Garrison, M. M. Jones, Charles I. Porter, Charles Blockson, of Wheeling; O. L. Rohrbaugh and W. W. Jameson, Salem; W. W. Karnes, W. E. Reed and Samuel E. Hulbert, of Fairmont; Albert E. Graham, Jarvisville; Thomas W. Arnett, Hutchinson; Milton Underwood, Eagles Mills; J. C. Trees, J. W. Kaufman and F. W. Clark, New Martinsville; E. M. Grant, Morgantown and Samuel Leaper, of Fairmont.

There were a great many Shriners present from out of the city, among them being:

W. J. Lynch, H. B. Lukins, of New Philadelphia, O.; Thomas B. Irvin, E. C. Schoen, of Pittsburgh; G. W. Kipp, Wellburg; Robert McHugh, New Martinsville; Alex. Brady, Monongah; C. P.
